SKEGNESS 4TH JULY By Clare Hanna

This was LOG's first outing to Skeg. The new map is excellent, offering some complex detail for sprint type control setting around the ornamental gardens and arcades on the seafront, good combinations of road, cut-through's and green pathways for longer legs, and on top of that the beach and dunes areas. As planner, I was spoilt for choice and the challenge was which areas to focus on and which to leave for future events. If part of my description of the area sounds unfamiliar to those who competed at Skeg, this just reflects which areas were missed and the future potential.

The day itself was hot and sunny. Like Venice, the Skegness event area had routes chock-a-block with slow moving tourist traffic - and that is where the similarity ends. Dodging the motability scooters or factoring the likely density of fish and chip eaters into route choice added a bit of complexity to the competition. The Short and Medium courses were largely around the sea-front area, with the Long Course venturing into the heart of Skegness. Everyone had to dodge the concert venue that popped-up on Friday night.

Ben Mather stormed around the ponds and ornaments to win and take the short course over Hannah, and win the series. Mike Hampton visiting from OD took the medium. With Andy Barker-Pilsworth who had driven for 3 hours especially to compete, finishing less than three minutes behind Jeff Baker, Jeff held on by one point to take the Medium series. On the Long course, it was a one-two for Liam Harrington and David Jolly, both on the day and in the series result.

43 tenacious orienteers attended the 3rd MMM on 22nd Aug.

As in the previous years the temperature rose to the high 20's, and with the hilly Wolds underfoot the runners suffered as a result - with lots missing the three hour deadline and receiving severe penalty's.

Congrats go to Sue Richmond in obtaining 310 points.

Thanks go to Paul in doing a sterling job .

Trying to get some shade after the run.

A very short version of LOG news - it has really been a summer of non events, the joining of the Scottish six days to W.O.C seem to make for less. Hope you all managed to catch the WOC on TV .

Winner of the last competition will be in the next issue which I will publish right after the Burghley Event.
